>Hello fellow readers, this will be my first story to be published but I wouldn't really be calling a story more like reasoning on the most talked about question in zootopia fans everywhere.

"Are Nick and Judy a couple?"

However ,just as described on the title, what other question should be asking about the zootopia movie itself.

Now the movie took a long time to make, but that was because through the developement of the 5 years they were making it, they were trying to depict what or how should this be played out.

I believe some of you know that the first idea of the film was having all prey wear these shock collars that what 'shock' a predator if feeling aggitated or angry. I've watched some scenes from the internet and read most articles out there about the movie, and showed extremely interesting facts about them.

So I know that most people want to see these two get together and at the end of the movie it made it unclear about it, but maybe this is something Disney plans to do in the sequel.

Like what if they even were a couple but when other animals stare at them they think its unnatural and something that others disgust and that made them feel like 'what am I doing wrong', 'love is mutual'.

Now here's another story, what if they were just friends at the end then the sequel will have different problems facing the main characters. For instance, what if there was someone else that Nick falls for then there would some sort of jealousy scene there or more of a 'oh no, I'm losing my best friend'; but who am I to decide.

Alright lets talk about the question that does not involve 'cute couples', what is with the shock collars. In the real movie we don't see much, well more, of Nicks background like where does he live and how he was his family (Mother and Father) like.

During the making of the movie, Disney had a drawn clip of Nick's apartment. They also show that there was a clip in which, either if that was Nick talking as the grown up or the little child was Nick and that was his dad or son- I can't tell-, where they wanted to own a tailor shop in which the loan of it was rejected and the little boy picked up the stamp which the Gerbals were holding and the Rhino dressed as a police officer grabbed him and took him away while the dad try's very hard to set him free.

I would of loved to see that movie with the shock collars; You know zootopia fans, can't get enough of it. I would've loved to see how that played out, we'd get a little more of background in Nick's life.

That story had some sadness in the collars because the predators had to wear it their whole live living with the pain of the shock. There was a clip in a hospital, I think, that a fox had a collar removed from his neck giving him the sensation of freedom.

There was also a scene where they had a prison and Judy hopps was set in charge and then Nick Wilde escaped from police custody. In which she'll chase him was also drawings of a amusment park he owned called wilde times.

Hope you guys like these thoughts and leave a review on what u thought.
